You can easily download videos from YouTube, Dailymotion, Youku, Vimeo, VK, 9GAG, Facebook and other sites directly into your computer. A couple of months ago, I began to dig into the Developer Console, mainly because I needed to customize the Facebook HelloSign email templates. I did just that, but I also discovered that the Developer Console allows for more functionality than I expected, and in many cases, it can be more powerful than the standard API (Facebook's) interface. In this blog post, we'll look at a few of these new options, including: Facebook Timeline Checkins Goals Insights Ads The Developer Console is essentially a sandbox that offers the functionality of the API, but without requiring you to upload any data to your own site. This means that you'll be able to explore how these new features work without the risk of accidentally publishing information to your own site. Before we start, here's a brief overview of the tools and functions included in the Developer Console: The Developer Console essentially acts as a WYSIWYG interface that lets you explore different facets of the Facebook API, and explore and test possible combinations without having to upload any data into your own site. Here's a list of the options that'll be most useful to the most people who are developing Facebook apps: There are a large number of additional tools and features available in the Developer Console. The best way to discover them is to learn as much as possible about the API, and poke around in the Developer Console to find out what's possible and how it works. Here, I'll give you a basic overview of a few of the most useful options: Facebook Timeline The Timeline option is the only native Facebook app included with the Developer Console. It's a very basic app that's really designed to show you the data that's available to you via the API. In other words, it lets you view the profiles of people you've been friends with, who were friends with you, and the list of friends who have also installed your app. Here's a sneak peak of the data that Timeline brings you. It shows you the number

SaveFrom.net Helper is a useful online tool that enables you to download videos from online platforms, such as YouTube, Facebook, Vimeo, Dailymotion, VK, etc. What is the best utility to have on your PC for privacy? The software is called HTTPS Everywhere and is an extension for Chrome that helps users browse the Internet more privately. This application was added to let consumers know that they can be tracked in the process, even when they visit our favorite websites. This utility helps inform users that they are being tracked through the browser as they navigate the Internet and write down the records of where they go. HTTPS Everywhere is not the tool to kill your computer, but, it will enable you to browse the web much easier through the use of a VPN that will effectively encrypt any and all data that you need to share with someone else. By using the VPN, you will be able to browse websites that are known to be used by hackers to steal or commit an identity theft. In addition, you will be able to hide your real location from anyone who might be snooping around and could potentially uncover your identity. Your browsing history will also be protected by this software, to let you browse freely and without any worries. HTTPS Everywhere helps end to the practice of the government secretly recording data. Every time you load a URL, HTTPS Everywhere takes note and stores a record about where you go. You can also browse each website anonymously, through the use of a personal proxy for your browsing. It can be used for both work and personal usage and it will help you in a lot of ways. It will protect your privacy on the Internet and will help you to hide your location. It is a useful software that you should have on your PC if you want to be safer on the Internet. The features that HTTPS Everywhere offers are the following: Vastly increases your privacy online, and the URL's of websites will be tracked for no data is left behind, and all data is encrypted. It hides you from IP address, and cookies, and when you visit a website for the first time, it will automatically switch your HTTP connection to HTTPS. Allows you to browse anonymously, it will enable you to toggle between different search engines, Google, Bing, Yahoo, etc., to help you gain full benefit from the search engine results. In case of an emergency, you can also use the software to block the DNS and to get to another website that is configured manually.
