What's New in the?

Students and parents alike will be feeling pretty delighted with the exciting news that last December saw the publication of the 2013-14 Curriculum Review (CR) of Religious Education in England. As you may or may not know, the CR is a once-in-ten-year review of the nationally-agreed curriculum priorities and regulations for the teaching of Religion and Ethics in all schools throughout the country. It is the responsibility of the Department for Education (DfE) to manage, coordinate and deliver all curriculum policies, requirements and delivery, including overseeing all new curriculum which is to be published by 2014. The review process was carried out by a group of expert teachers and writers which included advice from religious education teachers, head teachers, religious education coordinators, governors, community representatives and academic colleagues. The final report, 'Caring for the Heart of the Nation: a 2013-14 Curriculum for Religious Education', is a reflection of this work. What does it all mean? You'll have to wait and see! But the CR presents an exciting opportunity for PRS to continue to advance our work in this area. After all, the CR is not the only way in which we can secure our future role as an integral part of the development of education for all children and young people in England. This is an increase of nearly 10% since January, when it was 42%. A further 30% said they believed it was the UK's relations with the US. The US-UK relationship has been strained since it voted to leave the EU, although the poll suggests this is only deepening. Three-quarters of respondents now feel that the UK has become a weaker trading partner, up from 75% in January. A total of 22% of those polled said they thought
