I have no desire to ever use this ID as any other column in the table (such as an auto-numbering or a primary key). The ID is already a non-nullable column. I'm interested in which way makes the most sense for this scenario. Should I put the ID as a primary key in the table, with a unique constraint on it? Or should I make it an auto-numbering column and add a constraint to only accept unique values? Any ideas? Thanks. A: The way it should be
