some important rules for sale of wines by auction we should in ordinary cases be able to sell wine by auction for not less than its invoice price plus commission, say, at least 3 per cent; and that the wine be bottled in deposit bottles at least with the seller's name on it for identification we should give notice of our intention to sell wine by auction to the firm to whom the wines belong i am not sure if that is the rule generally obeyed, but such notice should be sent; the firm should have time to receive the wine and to secure orders; a cask is a cask is a cask i should think they are to be sold by auction on receipt of the 10th june so far as known i don't think there is any rule as to the date on which the wine shall be sold at auction it would depend on the usual custom and the circumstances of the case i think in most cases it would be sold at the time notified to the firm when it is received they are all to be sold without reserve; i don't think they are to be sold without reserve; as i advanced the prisoner the full amount on the wine before he deposited it, i consider he must pay interest on that amount it does not matter whether we took a bill or a note i think a bill is better, he is then certain to pay the bill; he agreed to sell to us for cash at the time the goods were delivered it is not quite clear whether he sold for cash or credit; some wine is sold on credit on applications after the sale; it is settled and given without reserve, but is not entered on the book of the firm it is to be sold at not less than its invoice price; if it is sold at the time of sale, at least i never sold wine for less than the invoice price; i did not think it wise to do it on the sale of wine unless it was wanted just then it must not be let stand over; wine must not be sold below its price in the market i should think the wine must be bought in on the sale of it i think it would be no good to buy wine for about the market price at an auction sale, as it might take three years to sell; wine is seldom sold below its market price the market of course is now a good thing, it is not the same as when we were in business
