
The Chappelle Show 720p 480

chappelle and brennan's show was a hit, and its eight-and-a-half-season run on comedy central was a turning point for the channel, which had previously been lacking an edgy comedy show. the show's success led to two more sketch shows and an hourlong stand-up special, which chappelle hosted for comedy central, after which he left the channel to create his own show and launch his own dvd company. chappelle's success also led to his first stand-up special, a bird's tale. he said he thought the special would be a one-off project, but it turned into the foundation of his stand-up career. "i knew the first stand-up special would be my last one," he said. "i was really nervous about it. i was afraid i'd quit. i was really afraid i'd die." chappelle's new stand-up act is centered on his family. he says his comedy has less in common with the unvarnished stand-up of his early shows and more with the more comical way he talks about his family, friends, and his movies in his intimate stand-up show. on the new one, which he's been performing since he was a kid, chappelle says, "i try to just talk about stuff that's fun. you'll never hear me talk about infidelity or a failed relationship. that's like a cheat sheet that i don't have." chappelle has said the new show is very autobiographical, but he's careful to couch it in more general terms. "i just talked about my childhood and my family and the people i know, and if i said, 'i'm a black guy,' that would change the tenor of it," he said. "it's more, 'i'm a guy.' and then my family is an important part of it, and my work is an important part of it. but it's not just all of those things."

the key is to make those people know, chappelle said. the old people, the old white people, they just never got it. and i say im sick of them. i hate them! but we gotta be able to talk about that. we can't just cower in the corner and be like, 'oh my god, we suck.' we gotta talk about that, or they'll never let us back on the air. chappelle's short-lived career as a network television star is now inextricably tied to his ability to embrace and articulate the frustrations of black people. that's his job, to be a black comedian, chappelle said. in his first hour on the show, chappelle revealed that he suffered a stroke in february, but he has since recovered. he thanked his wife, his kids, and his mom, two sisters, and two brothers for their support. chappelle opened the hour with a nod to the ghostbusters premiere, saying, im sorry to all you mothers of all colors and nationalities, but i appreciate this. the 'busters are back, chappelle said. but not too much. i promise. chappelle also thanked his manager, his agent, and his publicist for their support. the hour also featured chappelle's stand-up comedy routine, in which he reflected on his second night of freedom after incarceration. i think we went down, but we got up. and we got up with a bang, chappelle said. i hope you enjoy the show. if you didn't like it, i don't care. im happy to be back. i think we put on a pretty good show. and we went down fighting. we put on the show and fought with everything we had. chappelle also apologized to the gay community for his 2001 monologue about anal sex, saying, it was a mistake. i apologize to gay people for that. as much as i hate the old people, theyre the ones who will benefit from the show, chappelle said. they cant watch it, but they can certainly hear it. 5ec8ef588b
