The Social Network Movie: 12 things Mark Zuckerberg didn't want you to know..Three-dimensional acetylcholine receptor superimposition for analysis of allosteric effects in muscle nicotinic acetylcholine receptors. A nonlinear least-squares function analysis has been used to investigate the effects of orthosteric ligands and allosteric modulators on the binding of agonists in muscle nicotinic acetylcholine receptors (nAChRs). The use of this analysis allows the introduction of synergistic and competitive effects of orthosteric and allosteric ligands, as well as cooperative effects within the agonist binding site. We have focused on the nicotinic acetylcholine receptors composed of five homologous subunits and with high selectivity for the neurotransmitter acetylcholine. The allosteric effect of acetylcholine, of the mollusk-derived molluscivore toxin Variolysin, and of the plant-derived toxin PBP α has been characterized using different orthosteric ligands. We have also analyzed the allosteric effects of these orthosteric ligands on the orthosteric binding sites of acetylcholine and of the PBP α toxin. In addition to providing the first quantification of allosteric interactions in nAChRs, our analysis further confirms the existence of negative cooperativity for orthosteric binding sites and positive cooperativity for allosteric
